PRODUCT CLAIMS FAQ's

Frequently Asked Questions

How do I know if my claim is subject to a damage claim?

Claims are considered "damage claims" if the product was involved in an incident resulting in damage to property or personal injury. If your battery has failed and did not result in any damage, the claim would be considered a warranty claim. If you believe your battery is eligible under the Exide-Branded Battery warranty, please visit the warranty section.

My battery was involved in an incident and may now pose a hazard. What should I do?

Your personal safety is of the utmost importance, so use extreme caution when handling or transporting the affected unit. If you feel the battery is not safe, please contact Battery Systems Customer Service at 800-782-7848 for further instructions.

Is a proof of purchase required to submit a damage claim?

The original purchase receipt or other valid proof of purchase does facilitate the claim process, but a lack thereof will not bar you from submitting a damage claim. The name and location of the retailer from whom the battery was purchased are required.

What is a valid proof of purchase?

A dated sales receipt from Retailer which clearly lists the model, price and any Core Charge (a deposit built into the original cost of a battery) is acceptable. In lieu of the original sales receipt, a copy of a credit card or bank statement is acceptable.

What are acceptable estimates for repair or medical bills?

All repair estimates must contain the repair company's letterhead and details to support the services needed to complete the repair. All medical bills should have the name of the medical practice and the doctor providing care (be sure to cover or remove any sensitive or confidential patient information with your submission).
